

Please do not jeopardize Indiana's "no call" rule. Indiana's "no call" rule allows me to come home and relax after work without receiving the two to three telemarketer calls I used to receive every evening. I understand the FCC is under pressure from lobby groups to be exempted from the federal "no call" rule, but you must take a stand to provide relief for the consumer. Indiana has established a precedent for a "no call" rule. If the FCC wishes to make a federal rule, then consider Indiana's rule as the baseline. Please do not implement a watered down "no call" rule that will undermine the success Indiana has created with their "no call" rule.

Thank you.
Steve Swoveland